ORGANIZATION BREIF

Who we are

Community Wellbeing & Social Services Organization (CWSSO) is an Afghan, non-governmental, non-profit and non-political organization established by Afghan professionals with a commitment to improving the wellbeing, dignity, resilience and opportunities of people and communities across Afghanistan.

CWSSO was established in 2023 and formally registered with the Ministry of Economy of Afghanistan in 2026 under Registration No. 6295.

CWSSO core Founding Leadership is Ms. Nadera Rahimi and as a co-founder of CWSSO, she contributes to the organization's vision, values and commitment to building more inclusive, dignified and resilient communities, with particular attention to women and girls and people who face barriers to opportunity and essential services.

CWSSO is a women-focused organization, with women and girls at the center of its programming and organizational priorities. The organization works to expand opportunities for women and girls while also supporting children, youth, persons with disabilities, returnees, vulnerable families and underserved communities.

Our work connects protection, empowerment, education, skills development, livelihoods, essential services, humanitarian support and community resilience through practical, inclusive and community-based approaches.

We believe women and girls should not only be recipients of assistance, but active participants, decision-makers and drivers of positive change within their families and communities.

Our commitment is simple: Listen to communities. Protect dignity. Strengthen capacities. Create opportunities. Build stronger futures and turn needs into practical opportunities for lasting change.

CWSSO is built to grow with purpose — not simply to grow in size.

PURPOSE

Why CWSSO

Women and girls across Afghanistan continue to face barriers to education, skills development, economic opportunities, essential services, participation and safe access to community resources.

CWSSO was established to contribute to practical solutions that help women and girls strengthen their skills, confidence, economic resilience, access to services and ability to participate in decisions affecting their lives and communities.

Our work also recognizes the interconnected needs of children, people with disabilities, returnees, vulnerable families and underserved communities.

We begin by listening to communities, understanding local realities and identifying existing capacities. We then work with communities and appropriate partners to develop practical, inclusive and accountable responses.

Women-focused. Community-led. Inclusive. Practical. Accountable.

We start with the community, work with what exists, and build toward what is possible.

Our working sequence

- Understand the local context
- Identify needs and existing capacities
- Plan practical responses
- Work with appropriate partners
- Deliver responsibly and learn from results

MONITORING:

Monitoring and evaluation form the basis for modification of interventions and assessing the quality of activities being conducted. CWSSO usually performs M&E as an obligatory mechanism for the implementation of its project; CWSSO performs monitoring of its projects regularly that include finding facts regarding projects progress the results of which is being generated in the form of both, qualitative and quantitative reports and data, and facts and figures of the progress. The monitoring is usually taking place on two levels A-Managerially and B-Technically.

Monitoring takes place in accordance with the requirements measuring the achievements according to the set indicators and benchmarks against the objectives stated in the project document and proposal for achieving the following results:

- Effectiveness: CWSSO collects and analyzes monitoring data on a monthly basis to assess the extent to which project objectives are achieved, including the number of beneficiaries reached, the quality of services delivered, and beneficiary satisfaction.
- Efficiency: The organization monitors the effective utilization of financial, human, and material resources by comparing inputs against outputs to ensure timely, cost-effective, and high-quality programme implementation.
- Impact: CWSSO evaluates the long-term outcomes of its interventions by measuring improvements in the well-being, livelihoods, resilience, and quality of life of women, girls, children, and vulnerable communities, as well as positive changes in community knowledge, attitudes, and practices.

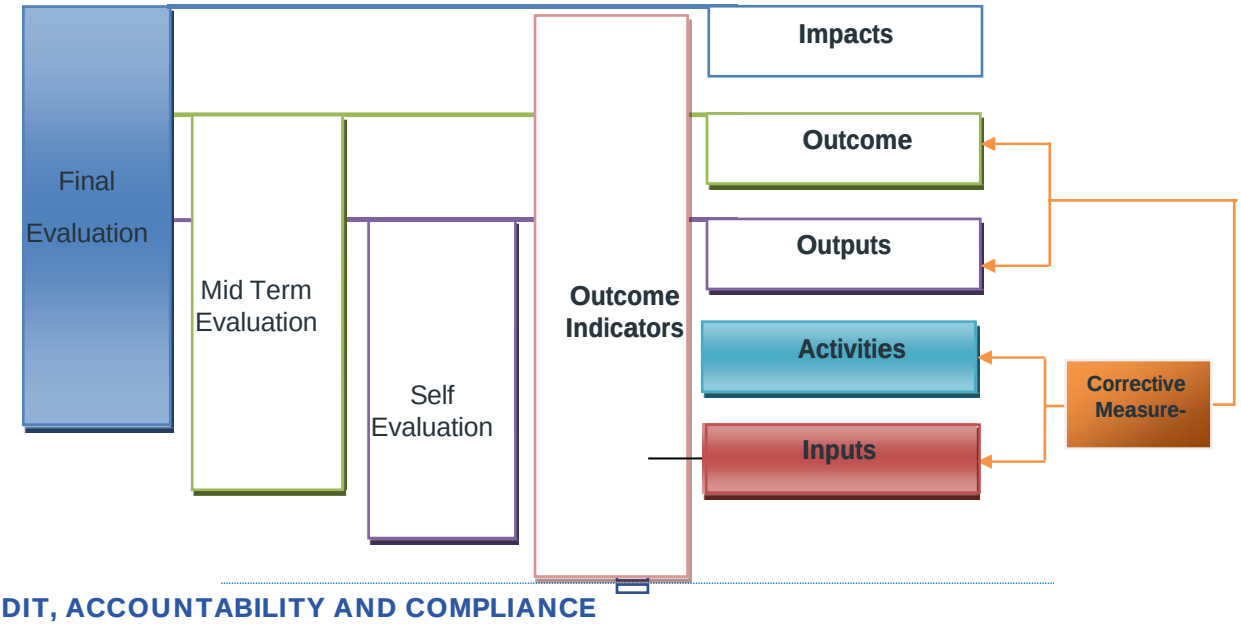

Monitoring on a technical level will be taking place by the project key staff. The tool for this kind of monitoring will be the curriculum and production methodology, measuring the indicators and other benchmarks.
The monitoring process must answer WH questions.

EVALUATION:

Evaluation as monitoring will be taking place as a systematic and independent examination of the project, to determine its efficiency, effectiveness, impact, sustainability, and relevance in the light of its objectives.
CWSSO will not only consider the process of the project but would also evaluate the outcome/output against the input.
